What We Become

But the universe, in its innocence, has a way, through no fault of its own, of ending that which has exceeded its usefulness. Historical Addendum to "Life lived equals life left in stationary populations".

The Other Side of Joy

Perhaps it is a timely reaction against a very narrow understanding of national cinema and the problem that has haunted European cinema for decades: we make films for national audiences, but we have never really managed to make a creative and diverse European cinema work for a transnational European audience.
